A WINTER DAY IN THE COUNTRY

Do you know of anything more delightful than a Winter Day in the Country? The opening scene of the picture shows a farm. The horses are brought in from the field, the chickens are fed. A saw mill, tread by horses, is seen, quite an unusual sight. While the farmer is still busy at work, his friends come and make a neighborly call.

Everything is gotten ready for a sleigh ride. A sleigh is quickly improvised and four farm horses put in harness. The party has not gone very far when the sleigh breaks down and all are thrown in the snow.

Having returned to the farmer's home, all get ready for a day of fun. The women sit down to a quilting party while the men go out gunning.

In the meanwhile the quilting party is going ahead fairly well. But while the women are peacefully chatting, a wee little mouse appears, and the transformation is magical, the peaceful scene giving way to one of pandemonium, the women making haste to seek the safety of a position on a high chair or table. After the little rodent goes back to its hole there is peace once more.

Now the men folks return and all engage in a game of blindman's buff. The grown up country people seem to get as much fun out of this child's game as others can out of any other.

Next on their program is the outdoor sport. The farmers take the ladies coasting; many times the huge bob sleighs upset throwing them into the snow, but they remount and the fun goes on.

This sport gives all a keen appetite, and back to the house they all go to satisfy it. While they are peacefully partaking of the victuals before them, the table-legs give way, and down they all go, a laughing, scrambling heap.
